Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure

On April 10, 2024, Micron Technology, Inc. (the "Company", "we" or "our") announced further information regarding the impact of the April 3, 2024 earthquake in Taiwan on the Company's operations and supply chain. As the Company announced in its press release issued April 3, 2024, all Micron team members are safe. The Company further notes that there is no permanent impact on facilities, infrastructure or tools and there is no impact to our long-term DRAM supply capability.

As of the date hereof, Micron is not yet at full DRAM production following the earthquake, but its fab activity is recovering well, aided by the dedicated efforts of its Taiwan operations team. Micron believes that past investment to make its infrastructure more robust and resilient has been beneficial in this recovery.

Micron currently estimates that the earthquake will result in an impact of up to a mid-single digit percentage of a calendar quarter's Company-level DRAM supply.
